The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

4,805

"Temperance beer" reads like a confusion of words.

There's much method and no madness in Barre just now.

Let's polish off the remaining differences and return to work.

Spring (gentle and ethereal) has abundant ground for sowing Winter for misplaced confidence.

Winston Churchill of New Hampshire can get "local color" for another book in his defeat by the Republicans in his own town of Cornish Tuesday night.

One Vermont newspaper calls him Judge Waterman of "Rutland" and another calls him Judge Waterman of "Brattleboro." Which is it, Judge?

The Vermont Methodists will probably have a tussle with dancing, the theatre, and card-playing matter. They are having it in all Methodist conferences.

Once again a boy has won first honors in the graduating class of Spaulding high school, but he was so closely followed by a girl that the honors are about even.

Behold the lion and the lamb—no reflections on either—dwelling together in peace and harmony; the editor of the Burlington Free Press commends the editor of the Rutland Herald.

WHO'S WHO IN VERMONT.

That book of surprises and disappointments, "Who's Who in America," contains the names of some 90 residents of Vermont. About a fifth of the names are those of Burlingtonians, the state university giving Burlington a good start with eight names of persons connected with that institution. Montpelier is credited with six—President J. A. DeBoer of the National Life, Senator Dillingham, Lawyer B. E. Fildes, Governor Proctor, Lawyer John Senter and Judge John H. Watson. Barre is yet to be represented, being perhaps too busy turning out monuments for the others.

DOING A GOOD SERVICE.

The Vermont Union Signal of Rutland, of which Philip J. Halvosa is editor, is engaged in a novel undertaking. Two issues ago The Signal made reference to a report of an alleged scandal in the conduct of certain people in the house of correction at Rutland and demanded that the authorities take some cognizance of the alleged facts. Now, the Vermont prison commissioners have granted permission to the contemporary to investigation, at its will, any and all phases of the affair; and that work the editor is now doing. If the first report of the affair be found to be correct, then The Signal will be doing a good service in bringing the thing to light. If, on the contrary, the allegations are disproved, an equally commendable thing will have been done, as in that case a pernicious report will be silenced. Thus far the head of the institution has placed at the disposal of the investigator whatever data he has asked for and Editor Halvosa promises to use no fear or favor in his undertaking, intending to give the house of correction a square deal and also to refrain from using the whitewash brush. It will be a good job done in any event.

HASTENED THE END.

The fury of the flames seems to have put the finishing touches to the retrograde movement of a little Vermont community when the greater portion of the village of Rockingham was wiped out on Tuesday morning. There are a great many other like communities in New England which are fading, slowly fading, into insignificance, to end finally in utter extinction insofar as a distinct individuality is concerned. There probably is not enough of the recuperative powers remaining in little Rockingham to cause the village, phoenix-like, to arise from its ruins. Thus the end is only hastened.

Thereby also acceleration was given to a movement which is changing the aspect of New England, turning the once populous sections into a wilderness and transforming the waste places into hives of industry. Once upon a time, the village of Rockingham was a bustling, flourishing village, the head of the affairs of the town and apparently destined to continue. Then the town offices were removed to the village of Bellows Falls at a more advantageous point, and the life blood was sucked from Rockingham village. Since that occurred, Rockingham has dwindled to a cluster of about a score of buildings; and now the fiery element has capped the climax of the downfall by wiping out a majority of the buildings, including the business places. It is a mournful tale on top of another more mournful tale—a story of the changing aspect of old New England, which is inevitable.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Dancing, Cards, Theatre.

The New England Methodist conference promptly seconded the New York conference in recommending repeal of the prohibition of dancing, card playing and theatre attendance. It is probably the West that will do the balking, as it did when the question was last raised.—Boston Transcript.

MAY BUILD RAILROAD.

Hinesburg is Asked to Bond For $10,000 to Assist.

Hinesburg, April 16.—An informal meeting was held here yesterday to see if the citizens favored bonding the town for $10,000 for the construction of the railroad from Burlington. The Hon. Chauncey W. Brownell and Judge E. C. Mower of Burlington were present and the understanding gained from their remarks was that if Hinesburg would bond for $10,000 for this purpose, the road would be built. A committee consisting of Daniel Patrick, H. A. Beecher and Henry Russell was appointed to canvass sentiment among the voters and report at a meeting to be held at a later day. The general opinion expressed is that the town will favor bonding.

BUSINESS COMPLETED.

At Northfield Village's Adjourned Meeting Tuesday Night.

Northfield, April 16.—The adjourned annual village meeting was held Tuesday evening with a large attendance of voters. It had been rumored that certain business transacted at the meeting the week before would be considered, but nothing of this kind was done. A resolution was passed making the annual rental of hydrants $30 instead of $25. This amount is paid by the village to the water department and there was some opposition. The trustees were authorized to extend the electric lighting system outside the village limits if the same in their judgment seemed advisable. This was passed in view of applications for electricity which have come from the Center and Falls villages.

G. L. Andrews was elected tree warden. This is a new office. His duties in part consist in seeing that the element of danger from decaying trees standing near public walks is removed. The motion of last week to cut off summarily all users of electricity who are 30 days in arrears was rescinded. It was voted to furnish light and water to the Brown public library and that the town be asked to bear its share of the expense.
